I need to see what you are producing so I can get an idea of where we are going and can start planning for how it will be presented.

I called Rob Runkel and we talked and we will talk with Steve today. Would you prefer to wait to get a final version of the load analysis in case that changes today or get what I have now? I guess that means I'm asking what your plans are for the information at this point. If it's to look at what I have and see what else you want to see, I'll send it all. If it's to post it and send it on, it would be wiser to wait to see if something changes so we don't send mixed messages. What do you think?
